Philosophy

ランドスケープ、建築、インテリア、プロダクトやアート。色々な仕事をして気が付いたのは、どの仕事も何かと何かの間を繋いでいる事。例えば、人と人を繋ぐテーブルや椅子のデザイン。人と自然を繋ぐ庭。人と都市を繋ぐ公園。過去と未来を繋ぐアート。考え始めるとキリがないくらいに当てはまる。そこで、プロジェクトを始める前に、人間、空間、時間のダイアグラムを書く様になる。何と何の間をどのように繋ぐと良いのだろうと考える。ランドスケープは直訳すると風景だが、風景をつくるという事は、あらゆる問題点を見つけ、その間を様々な手法で丁寧に繋ぐことで良質な仕上がりになる。風景司を大和言葉では、みわたさるもののつかさ、と読むらしい。風景司の仕事は、まさにトータルデザインではないかと考える。

In my various roles, I've observed that every job involves connecting one thing to another. For instance, designing tables and chairs connects people to each other. Gardens connect people to nature, while parks connect people to the city. Art bridges the gap between the past and the future. The possibilities are endless once you start thinking about it. Before embarking on a project, I begin by sketching a diagram that considers people, space, and time. I contemplate how to forge connections between different elements. While the word "landscape" translates literally to "scenery," creating a landscape involves identifying various challenges and meticulously linking them using diverse methods to achieve a high-quality outcome. In Japanese, "landscape architect" is rendered as "miwataru mono no tsukasa," which directly translates to "the director of the landscape." I firmly believe that the role of a landscape architect embodies comprehensive design.

EIKI DANZUKA (THE LANDSCAPE CREATOR)

Born in 1963 on the small island of Ohnyujima in Saiki City, Oita Prefecture, Eiki Danzuka grew up surrounded by the sea breeze carried by the Kuroshio Current and a forest with clear streams where fireflies dance. The scenery etched in his childhood memories profoundly influenced his artistic creations. After attending the Kuwasawa Design School, he studied under Nobuo Sekine, a prominent artist representing the Mono-ha (School of Things) movement. Danzuka's landscape art, both in Japan and overseas, is characterized by his distinct approach to connecting time, space, and human beings. In his attempt to create a landscape as the connecting device, he places significant importance on a sustainable process where his art creation itself returns to the Earth's environment. He is a visiting professor at Tama Art University, a part-time lecturer at Tokyo University of the Arts, and the founder of EARTHSCAPE INC. Notable prizes and awards he has received include the Urban Landscape Award, Civil Engineering Design Prize, BCS Prize, SDA Award, Good Design Award, AACA Honorable Award, D&AD Award in the UK, and the Green Good Design Award in the United States. In 2021, he will publish his book, "EARTHSCAPE: Creating Stories That 'Should Be There' (CCC Media House), a collection of works by Eiki Danzuka, a 'landscape artist' who creates stories that" should be there. He also engages in projects such as the "MHCP/Medical Herberman Cafe Project," "FUJIHAKU," which combines art with nature, community, and environment.
